APPENDIX XIII

[Answer to unstarred Question No. 113, asked by Sri N. K. Palanisami at the meeting of the Legislative Assembly held on 31st August 1961 page 455 supra.

Fry and fingerlings of fishes called fish seeds are collected from natural sources like rivers, irrigation canal systems, water spreads adjoining irrigation net-work channels, lagoons and estuaries. The rivers and their irrigation canal systems are however the main sources for supply of fish seeds. The Cauvery river system is one of the major sources in this State. The fish seeds are caught by the lessees at the various regulators in Thanjavur and Tiruchirappalli Districts by means of nets hung up near the sluices or by means of Bamboo traps called "Saars" fixed in the canal systems. The bigger fishes are taken by them for sale. The young ones are collected by the Departmental staff on the spot and transported to the nearest nurseries for storing till they are transported and stocked in the public and private waters of the State. The fish seeds, soon after collection at the spot, are kept in wiremesh boxes for some time to condition them before transporting them in special round tin carriers. The important varieties of fish seeds collected from the rivers and channels are the CATLA SPP, LABEO SPP, CIRRHINA SPP, BARBUS SPP. Besides the collection at the regulators, fry (the youngest of fish seeds) are also collected by the departmental staff in the marginal waters of rivers and channels by operating fry collection drag nets made of either Synthetic netting called Velon Screens or by cotton nets or by nets made of cloth. The estuarine
